

Story starter!

---

‘Welcome to Fruit City!’

The large, wooden sign in front of them told them the Smith family that they had arrived. Behind the sign sat the most enormous pear they had ever seen: it was the size of a house! On top of the pear stood a stalk that would have rivalled a small tree in height.

Peter could simply not believe his eyes! He couldn't wait to see inside the city! As they overtook a motorised banana and slid round the bend, the children pressed their excited faces against the cold glass of the car windows, each of them desperate to catch another glimpse of something weird and wonderful...

Can you continue the story of the Smith family's trip to Fruit City? What will they discover inside?

Do you think Fruit City is a place where people live, a theme park or something else entirely?

You could draw or make your own Fruit City, and then create a persuasive poster or letter persuading people to visit, or to go and live there!

Question time!

---

- ▶ Do you know the difference between a fruit and a vegetable?
- ▶ Which fruit do you think would be most suitable for building a house?
- ▶ If you ate a cherry from the shelf in the shop, would you be stealing?
- ▶ If you like kiwi fruit, but another person doesn't, is that because it tastes different to them?

Perfect picture!

---

Imagine that Fruit City is a theme park. Can you design one of the rides?

Sentence challenge!

---

Can you use a colon to add more detail to a clause?

- ▶ Banana cars travel very slowly: their shape gets in the way of the wheels.
- ▶ Giant pears make for a tasty lunch: ...
- ▶ Pineapples are perfect for living in: ...

Sick sentences!

---

These sentences are 'sick' and need help to get better. Can you help?

- ▶ They drove past the big pear.
- ▶ In front of them a banana car went around the bend.

